(maximum 150 words)	How much time do you anticipate being able to spend on SIG activities in an average week?
Andrew	Bell	Fellow	I have always served as an active volunteer on APM committees, and I am currently chair of the People SIG. I wish to continue this role.	I am organised, I understand and I am familiar with APM procedures and organisation. I am currently organising and chairing People SIG business successfully. I currently have the time to devote to this commitment.	Around 4-6 hours a week.

Robert	Blakemore	Full	I am a current member of the committee. As a project and programme manager of some 30 years standing, I have encountered many delivery team situations where people skills have either helped or hindered delivery. I am motivated to volunteer to pass on this knowledge, and to continue to develop my own knowledge through the interaction with others and other business sectors that volunteering provides. I am an enthusiastic advocate for the work of the APM within Government, and intend to apply for chartered status in due course. My volunteering gives me an opportunity to work with academics and researchers to learn from contemporary approaches elsewhere, as well as disseminating more widely the advances in the government project delivery profession.	I am a project management coach and mentor within government, and am currently mentoring two staff. I am also mentored myself by a project director of a high-profile programme. I am an enthusiastic team leader and team member, and have an interest in what makes 'high performing delivery teams', including the associated culture, leadership, project controls and governance that produce the required creativity and problem solving. I work in digital delivery - and therefore also have a keen interest in the skills needed for effective 'agile' delivery and the need to align this work with more traditional delivery techniques.	Varies - 2-3 hours ideally, although I will be under some time pressure on occasion, because of work commitments in the next 12 months.
Ian	Cribbes	Full	Having been a member for the previous year I feel that I can continue to offer a great deal to the SIG.	Stakeholder Engagement is a passion of mine and I do believe that my experience in this area, in particular in the international field will continue to benefit both the APM and the SIG.	2-5 hours

Tim	Elliot	Fellow	To continue and contribute to the great and rewarding work the current committee members undertake in articulating the importance of stakeholder engagement facilitation across the whole project lifecycle and finding new innovative ways and techniques to deliver this important task.	I have a passion for the people aspect of Project Management and feel in today's world there is not enough emphasis placed on the mental resilience and wellbeing of the Project Manager and the delivery team. In the world of big data & IKM understand how important stakeholder engagement facilitation and relationships are in successful delivery of outputs, products and benefits. The Project Manager of today must be well versed in NLP, read situations and adapt leadership/ engagement styles to suit the stakeholders, situation and operating environment to achieve the appropriate outcomes – All of which demonstrates varying levels of mental resilience.	I can commit to 10+ hours a week as the subject and work output supports my day job in terms of engaging with the DE&S Project Management Function on best practice.
Tim	Lyons	Fellow	Strong correspondence with my areas of interest & expertise: Comms, Coaching & mentoring, Right Brain application to project excellence.	Big project experience, multi-sector experience, research done in project decision-making, communication skills (ex-broadcasting).	3 hours

Annie	Maingard	Full	I have spent nearly a year on the committee with People SIG and I have gained so much already. I am motivated to put myself forward for election again, as I hope to spend another year contributing and gaining from this SIG group.	I have over ten years' experience in project management and a particular interest in people skills. From my day to day role, I bring a personal interest and lessons learnt in people skills. What motivates people? How do you engage your stakeholders? Some of the questions I ask myself, and like to share my experience of.	I attend the calls as often as I can, and I plan to come to the next face to face meeting. I dedicate an hour a week to People SIG activities.
Ian	Mason	Full	I firmly believe that people can make or break projects. Motivating people in line with the project objectives is a key skill. Recognising the huge contribution that people make to projects and the skills, behaviours that underpin this contribution, I'm passionate about joining the People SIG Committee and looking to support the development, knowledge in this area. I'm keen that people skills are given as much priority as technical skills with the project management community, and that, through the SIG, we look to develop further the people competencies across project, programme and portfolio management. I genuinely believe that through the People SIG, we can generate high calibre project leaders that can inspire individuals and teams to deliver successful projects.	I have over 20 years of project and programme management experience. As well as delivering a broad and varied list of complex projects during this time, I have also carried out functional and business leadership roles. I have managed and lead diverse teams across many disciplines including international work. This broad range of experience has allowed me to understand how to get the best out of people within a project environment as well as developing and mentoring them outside of the 'day job.' Fundamentally, I consider myself a people's person, and someone who can relate to the individual and their drives and needs. I'm passionate about developing people skills within a project management environment and believe I can make a significant and valued contribution to the People SIG committee.	4 to 6 hours

Oliver	Randall	Associate	I have been involved with the SIG for the last 2 years and would like to continue my involvement.	I am a business owner and network regularly which I feel can help increase the scope and diversity of the membership over time.	1 hour
David	Richardson	Full	I have been a committee member for some time.	I have significant experience in developing large numbers of project delivery professionals at all levels. I am interested in the importance, and ability to influence. the people element of successful project delivery.	I have had no problem meeting the requirements of the SIG committee including representing the SIG at no committee events.
