

Caspar Bartington APM Education Manager

- The APM Education Programme: an update on APM's plans and how you can get involved
- The project profession as a rewarding career: the global opportunities it offers in an unexpectedly wide range of sectors.

Caspar Bartington is the APM's Education Manager. A University of London graduate, and a qualified marketer, Caspar has a background in UK and international marketing and engagement.

Before joining APM, Caspar was the CII's Relationship Manager for Education, working with schools, universities and employers to raise awareness of early careers programmes, including apprenticeships, and build a talent pipeline for sector employers.

Caspar's current role includes promoting project management as a first career to school students and their influencers, as well as university students who are not on PM degree programmes. Caspar's apprentice and graduate ambassador networks already have more than 100 APM members who support the outreach that Caspar will be managing.

