

Corporate Members' Leadership Group (CMLG)

APM has some 600 corporate members – including bluechips with global reputations, some of the most prestigious of our universities, and many others from a wide variety of all sizes and sectors.

A number of them are represented in our Corporate Members' Leadership Group. It seeks to be the voice of project management within the wider business world.

The Group includes some of Britain's best known industrial and service corporations, and we also fully recognise the contribution of project management to SMEs.

There's no part of modern life that will not benefit from being run more efficiently and more effectively using project and programme management techniques.

So we want businesses in the UK from the Boardroom to the shop floor to appreciate the difference which expert and experienced project management can make.

Who are we:

The Corporate Members Leadership Group is a group of Project Management Leaders who represent the application of project management across private, public and not for profit sectors

What do we do:

Our purpose is to provide insight, direction and structure to the development of the Project Management profession to meet the current and future challenges our stakeholders are facing

Why are we qualified:

Our representation has a broad sector and combined with the significant size of the PM community that we represent this allows us to provide unique insight into the current and future challenges the profession faces.

How will we do it:

We will achieve our purpose through

- Listening, learning, sharing and leading based on our collective experience
- Participating in a structured dialogue within the Association for Project Management and with external parties that informs the direction that the Association takes to developing and promoting the profession
- Changing the way we develop and deliver project management in our own organisations
