

Why invest in the APM Project Management Qualification (PMQ)?

Strengthen delivery capability.

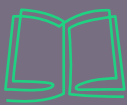

A recognised qualification for project management professionals

The APM Project Management Qualification is a globally recognised qualification that demonstrates a broad understanding of project management principles, practices and techniques.

Whether completed through self-study or with an accredited training provider, APM Project Management Qualification helps individuals develop the knowledge, confidence and practical capability needed to manage projects more effectively and contribute to successful organisational outcomes.

Investment in the APM Project Management Qualification supports the development of skilled project professionals, strengthening organisational capability and improving the delivery of projects and change initiatives.

Why employers invest

80% say APM qualifications increase confidence to deliver projects successfully.*

73% say APM qualifications help deliver projects more successfully.*

Most APM qualifications are employer funded, reflecting the recognised value organisations place on developing project capability, professional standards and successful delivery outcomes.

Source: Value of APM qualifications research report*

Business value at a glance

Build confidence to contribute effectively

80% of qualification holders say APM qualifications increase their confidence to deliver projects successfully, helping individuals contribute more effectively to projects and change initiatives.*

Improved project outcomes

73% say an APM qualification helps them deliver projects more successfully through the application of recognised project management principles and best practice.*

Create consistency across teams

The APM Project Management Qualification helps establish a common approach to project management, enabling teams to work more consistently, communicate more effectively and deliver projects using recognised standards and best practice.

Strengthening organisational capability

Investing in the APM Project Management Qualification helps organisations develop skilled project professionals who can deliver change more effectively, reduce risk and improve project outcomes.

Gain immediate value

Develop practical project management knowledge and techniques that can be applied immediately to live projects, whether achieved through self-study or an accredited training provider.

A clear progression pathway

The APM Project Management Qualification is a globally recognised milestone in professional development and provides a strong platform for continued learning, ongoing professional development and progression towards Chartered Project Professional (ChPP) status.

Trusted by

BAE SYSTEMS

M

M

AtkinsRéalis

Balfour Beatty

MOTT
MACDONALD