RICS Managing Efficient Design Delivery Seminar

Guidance Note Launch: A practical guide to professional standards

Design delivery management (DDM) is a key element in the construction chain. It is an essential, valued connection between the client’s needs and the construction process and what’s more, DDM is universal to projects of any size and location.

RICS Managing Design Delivery Seminar provides a unique opportunity for professionals seeking new guidance in meeting higher standards.

James Mather’s new Guidance Note, will help you to strengthen the response of your delivery teams to the design, improve performance efficiency and meet the role’s requirements.

Balfour Beatty and Crossrail’s case-study sessions offer an exclusive opportunity for you to gain first-hand insights into the practical execution, process and delivery of large-scale design.

Join like minded professionals at the UK’s leading DDM Seminar and gain realistic, effective strategies to streamline your DDM to a professional standard, plus learn, benchmark and be updated on all information relevant to your design challenges.

A complimentary copy of the RICS Managing Efficient Design Delivery Guidance Note will be included in the seminar documentation.

Who should attend?
Executives, surveyors, property professionals and consultants involved in:
- Projects, Portfolios & Programmes
- Contract & Procurement
- Strategic Performance & Development
- Data
- Building Information Modelling (BIM)
- Assets
- Funding & Investment
- Commercial Finance
- Design
- Architecture

Sponsorship Opportunities

RICS’ events are attended by senior decision makers from across the UK and offer fantastic thought leadership and networking opportunities for your organisation. Focused and high level, our events provide excellent speaking opportunities and the perfect environment to build new relationships.

Sponsorship opportunities range from exhibition stands to sponsored lunches, evening receptions, gala dinners and a host of informal social networking events.

Speakers include

Chair

James Mather
Principal, Johnston & Mather and
RICS Guidance Note Lead Author

James Mather has been in private practice in architecture since 1980, when he co-founded Johnston & Mather, of which he is now principal. Since 1995, he has taught management subjects in construction, and for 13 years was director of the Reading University Certificate in Construction Project Management course. These days, he is director of the RIBA Certificate in Construction Project Management, and also teaches for the RICS in its short courses on project management, and management strategy for the College of Estate Management.

Malcolm Taylor
Head Technical Support Services, Crossrail

Malcolm Taylor is Head of Technical Information with Crossrail and his current responsibilities include BIM strategy; technical data management; EDMs document control; GIS; and configuration management. He is a Chartered Engineer - prior to his secondment into Crossrail in 2009 he was Rail Director for AECOM UK working on many UK and international rail projects. Malcolm has over 30 years experience in the design, construction and maintenance of large-scale transportation projects in Europe, the Middle East and Far East, with a particular emphasis on railways and metro design.

David Philp
BIM Programme Director, Balfour Beatty

Balfour Beatty is a world-class infrastructure services business that operates across the infrastructure lifecycle. David works within the construction services part of the business at the pre-construction stage. His role is very much about bringing together integrated teams to deliver solutions for customers that meet their business objectives and can ultimately be built safely and sustainably. David is also leading the innovation drive, especially accelerating the adoption of virtual design and construction (VDC) and new data driven processes & technologies such as Building Information Modelling (BIM) within the business.
